

Welcome to

Thanksgiving Table Talk!

It's that time of year when friends and families gather at the table for a time of gratitude, good food, and of course, conversation. Sometimes conversation between dinner guests is easy to navigate. Other times? It can get dicey, superficial, or so loud and crazy that no one hears what anyone else is saying. These Table Talk Cards are a handy way for those gathered at the table to share, learn, laugh, and enjoy the art of dinner table conversation. Enjoy!

Happy Thanksgiving! - Melissa

Directions:

- Print cards on a nice cream-colored cardstock or any other paper you have.
- Cut cards out and place one underneath each dinner plate or place in a small bowl and pass around. Each person gets one card. (If you have more than 20 guests, just print two sets of questions.)
- Once dinner begins, each guest can take a turn answering their question.

- For additional conversation, encourage at least one follow-up question to be asked by another guest for each answer given.

Tell us about the weirdest teacher you ever had in school.

Share one struggle in your life you wish would be over.

What is one thing that scares you and why?

When do you feel most vulnerable?

Share about a time when you felt truly known by someone else.

If you could walk in anyone else's shoes for one day, who would it be and why?

If you could do one thing without experiencing any consequences to your actions, what would it be?

How has at least one person in the room influenced your life? Tell them.

Name one thing (not a person!) that drives you crazy.

What is the last piece of really good news you've received?

If you could travel back in time 10 years, what advice would you give to your 10-year-younger self?

Name one question you wish you knew the answer to.

Share about two things that worry you and why.

If you could have either more time or more money, which would you choose and why?

Name someone in your life with whom you've lost touch but still think about. Share why they still come to mind.

What brings you deep joy and why?

Share something you've learned in the past month.

What is one of the best gifts you've ever received? Why was it one of the best?

Tell us about the first paying job you ever had. Did you like it? Why or why not?

What is one of the hardest things you've ever done?
